

“The Salisbury School Archives serves as the final repository of records, photographs, publications, papers, and artifacts that document the history of the school. The Archives collections include the papers of past Headmasters, records related to the Board of Trustees, an enormous assortment of school publications, tens of thousands of photographs and slides, oral history interviews, audio recordings, and rare film and video footage. It is the Archives mission to preserve, catalogue, interpret the materials and make them available [where appropriate] to the school community and the wider public.”
